The U. S. Coast Guard motto is Semper Paratus which is Latin for "Always Ready," but to stay ready requires training and that was the mission for the 225 foot sea-going buoy tender Willow when she pulled away from Naval Station Newport's Pier 2 at 8:30 a.m. on Oct. 26 and set course for East Passage.

Her specific mission: to exercise Spilled Oil Recovery System (SORS) operations.

"We're required to do the training annually, what is different is that we are taking advantage of the expertise gained by the Juniper crew from their experiences last year. A real benefit for us," said Lt. Cmdr. Brian Donahue, commanding officer, who commands a crew of 44 officers and enlisted personnel.

Last summer, the USCG cutter Juniper, sister ship to the Willow, deployed SORS equipment and recovered more than 145,660 gallons of oil during response efforts to the Deepwater Horizon oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico. Fourteen crew members from Juniper joined the Willow for the day to assist with the training. Both the

SAM the goose dog sets sights on coyote control

By NAVSTA Environmental

Naval Station Newport Environmental Office announced the award of a new contract to address coyote management both within the Naval Station Newport fence line and around selected housing areas.

The issue of coyotes co-existing with people on Aquidneck Island and elsewhere has been a major topic of discussion in recent years and the incidence of human interactions with the animals has become a safety concern that led to this contract being developed.

Paul Champlin of Bird-strike Control Program was awarded the contract in late September and began Oct. 1 working with SAM, his border collie, to harass coyotes found on board the installation. This technique has proven effective at other Department of Defense installations. SAM (which stands for Surface to Air Missile) is no stranger to the base. He has been working at goose harassment within the fence line for the last three years. He is a specially trained animal whose job is to harass – not harm – both the geese and the coyotes so that they are uncomfortable about nesting or building their dens on the base.

SAM's success with the geese has been noteworthy. Prior to his taking on the job, the issue of geese droppings on the training/sports fields became a serious issue that was impacting the use of these facilities for physical training and athletic events. Unlike the geese contract,

Paul and SAM will also be harassing coyotes in the Coddington Cove, Greene Lane and Melville housing areas where the coyotes have often been seen in very close

NAVFAC vehicles on Flex-Fuel

By ANNALISA CACHIN
NAVFAC Mid-Atlantic Public Affairs

NORFOLK, Va. — As Energy Awareness Month comes to an end, Naval Facilities Engineering Command (NAVFAC) Mid-Atlantic is encouraging commands across the region to continue the use of Alternative Fuel Vehicles (AFVs) throughout the transportation fleet.

NAVFAC is the Central

Manager of the Navy's Base Support Vehicle and Equipment (BSVE) Program, of which the use of AFVs are an integral part in contributing to President Obama's Federal Fleet Performance Memorandum, released May 24, asking the federal government to serve as an example to American citizens.

Currently, 52.5 percent (2,598 vehicles) of the fleet in the Mid-Atlantic region is comprised of Flex-Fuel vehicles. Flex-Fuel vehicles are a type of AFV that use E-85 fuel — the blend of 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent gasoline. This year, 68 regional police vehicles, 15 passenger vans and 50 minivans were added to the Flex-Fuel vehicle fleet.

Of the Navy's 46,485 non-tactical vehicle fleet, approximately half of the light and medium vehicles are alternatively-fueled.

Radiologic techs to mark milestone

By MARK SCHELLENBERG
 NHCNE Radiology Program Adviser

National Radiologic Technology Week, Nov. 6 to 12, was established to coincide with the 1895 discovery of x-rays by German physicist Wilhelm Conrad Roentgen on Nov. 8.

The week honors the role that medical imaging and radiation therapy professionals – known as radiologic technologists – play in health care practice, and to educate others about the medical imaging profession through open houses, job fairs and displays.

After Roentgen's discovery of x-rays, Thomas Edison developed a fluoroscope in 1896 that became the standard for the employment of x-rays in health care. News of Edison's "x-ray machines" reached as high as the White House.

In 1901 President McKinley requested one to help locate an assassin's bullet that was lost in his abdomen after he was shot at the Buffalo, N. Y., Pan-American Exposition. The machine arrived, but was never used, and the President eventually died from infection from his wounds.

Naval Health Clinic New England has both military and civilian radiologic technologists employed on its staff. Twenty technologists serve within three NHCNE clinics, providing top-quality radiography, ultrasound, mammography and bone density images for our patients. Each of them has been highly trained, either in local colleges or in the Navy's 13 month long Radiologic Technologist "C" School. All are dedicated to the art and science of radiography and the compassionate, professional delivery of patient care.

Proceedings Magazine honors two at War College for essays

By TYLER WILL
NWC Public Affairs Staff

The U.S. Naval Institute (USNI) recognized a U.S. Naval War College (NWC) professor and student as its 135th annual General Prize Essay Contest winners on Oct. 19 for articles published in USNI's Proceedings Magazine over the previous year.

Dr. Milan Vego, Joint Military Operations professor, received first place for three scholarly articles: "Technological Superiority is NOT a Panacea" which advocates for other factors besides technology to advance naval power; "China's Naval Challenge" which examines lapses in Chinese military power; and "AirSea Battle Must Not Work Alone" which evaluates cooperative tactical movements between the Navy and Air Force.

Cmdr. In Ha, College of Naval Warfare student, received third place for his article, "Away All...Hovercraft!" which challenges the use of hovercraft in modern warfare.

The General Prize Essay

Contest is one of the oldest continually operated writing contests in the nation and was first implemented in 1879 to promote writing aptitude among naval officers. Vego and Ha were notified by Institute officials of USNI's decision in early October and were honored in a ceremony in Annapolis, Md.

To choose the award recipient, editors of Proceedings judge the quality of published articles and select the best that appeared in the magazine's past issues from October of the previous year through September of the current year. Recipients will be formally recognized in the upcoming issue of the magazine in November, and also receive a monetary prize.

"While I sometimes thought that it would be nice to get an award, my primary focus has always been to submit solidly researched and well-argued articles on what I consider to be important issues of the day," Vego said in his acceptance speech and commended USNI for its mission.

Vego is an internationally recognized scholar in operational warfare, having written seven books and more than 300 articles in the field.

"To hit it out of the ballpark on the very first try is remarkable to me," Ha said. "Based on the criteria, I feel immensely proud, and based on past awardees like Adm. James Stavridis, or Milan Vego who won first place this year, I feel very humbled."

Ha credited his professional and academic background for his publication.

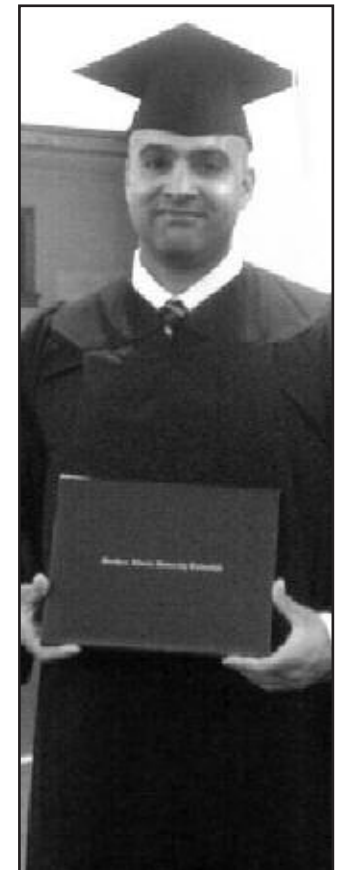

The articles can be read at <http://www.usni.org/magazines/proceedings/essay-contests>.

Author details need for manhunts

By JOHN KENNEDY
NWC Museum Director of Outreach

There is a history of targeting individuals through strategic manhunts. In his book, Wanted Dead or Alive: Manhunts from Geronimo to Bin Laden, author Benjamin Runkle looks at why manhunts are conducted, what the keys are to operational and strategic success, and what the implications are for the Global War on Terror.

Such manhunts are not assassinations, nor are they simply retaliatory attacks. As defined by Runkle, strategic manhunts use some overt employment of uniformed forces with an established chain of command.

Runkle was the featured guest at the Eight Bells Lecture series on Oct. 18 at the Naval War College Museum.

To demonstrate his point, Runkle details eight strategic manhunts, starting with the Geronimo campaign of 1885 and ending with the recent killing of Osama bin Laden. Each operation is well documented and points taken from each contribute to a broader overview as to how success or failure resulted.

Governmental policy-makers are often tempted to resort to the manhunt as a way to arouse public support. Imperfect as policy instruments, manhunts do help to personalize a conflict by demonizing a person or persons.

Dr. William "Bill" Morgan was scheduled to present his book, Pacific Gibraltar, at the latest lecture yesterday. It is the first account of the annexation of Hawaii.

Traffic detour announced

TRAFFIC ADVISORY — Taylor Road will be closed beginning Nov. 7 to accommodate resumed construction on the $19.2 million Fitness Center replacement for Gym 109 on Coasters' Harbor Island. The project was suspended temporarily for critical design changes that included an enhanced front entrance and other architectural improvements, raised access flooring to ensure future flexibility with fitness equipment, and a revised foundation system as required by flood codes. The new gym will house a two-lane indoor track; a six-lane 25-meter pool; racquetball, basketball/volleyball courts; and approximately 11,000 square feet of fitness equipment. Outside will be tennis courts, a softball field and ample parking. Detour signs will be posted, but motorists should drive slowly as the new route to the Surface Warfare Officers School and Center for Service Support passes through a pedestrian heavy area.

Navy, Army Prep rekindling rivalry

By BOB KREKORIAN
NAVSTA Public Affairs Staff

It's an annual football rivalry that started more than 61 years ago when the Naval Academy Prep School (NAPS) Rams played the U.S. Military Academy Prep School (MAPS) Golden Knights at the Bainbridge, Md., Naval Training Center.

Since then, NAPS leads the challenge, 27-22. From 1953-1965, the competition was suspended, in part, because of the Korean War.

The rivalry will be played out again on Nimitz Field on Saturday, Nov. 12, at noon, when NAPS will defend its possession of the 1st Lt. Frank S. Reasoner, USMC, Trophy, that is presented to the winner of the 'Little Army-Navy' game.

The Reasoner Trophy has been displayed at NAPS in the Ripley Hall quarter-deck, 2006, 2007, 2009 and 2010.

"This rivalry is a totally different atmosphere," said J.P. Shevory, NAPS head football coach. Preparing for the Army-Navy Prep game will start after the NAPS-USNA junior varsity game, Nov. 4, at Annapolis, Md., he said.

"We can practice and practice, but it comes down to the team that executes better on game day," he said.

NAPS beat Hudson Valley Community College, 21-7, Oct. 29, at Troy, N.Y., and now holds a record of seven wins and no losses. NAPS has outscored its opponents by 267 points and has allowed only 111 points.

Part of the reason why the NAPS football team has done so well this season is due to the quality of this season's coaching staff, Shevory said.

"They do a great job of mentoring our players," he said. Shevory is no stranger to the NAPS football regimen. He was NAPS defensive coordinator, 2005-2007, prior to becoming head coach in fall 2008. Assisting Shevory is Toran James, assistant football coach and defensive coordinator; and Jason McDonald, offensive coordinator. McDonald played football at Springfield College.

"We start every game with a certain mindset, but this game also has a certain allure to it," McDonald said.

The Commissary School was a vital cog in the mobilization of manpower brought about by World War I. Taken in 1919, this picture shows the baking prowess of the school at Newport Naval Station as they have arrayed before them breads, pies, rolls and cakes.

University and of the British Academy, the U.K.'s London-based national organization for distinguished scholars in the humanities and social sciences. Rodger has researched extensively the naval history of Britain, with his works spanning nearly 1,400 years of history.

"It is particularly appropriate for the Naval War College to make this announcement here at this symposium," said Christenson. "This prize is made for world-class achievement in original research that contributes to a deeper historical understanding of the broad context and interrelationships involved in the roles, contributions, limitations, and uses of the sea services in history."

Rodger told the audience of maritime leaders from more than 110 nations around the world that he was honored to be presented the award in front of such an august international delegation.

"I've often thought naval historians are able to do more service to navies than navies realize," Rodger said. "I like to take the opportunities that come my way to tell admirals this, but I must say, I never dreamt I should find myself with the opportunity to say this to all the admirals in the whole world."

proximity to the housing units. They will expand their patrols to include the housing areas beginning next week.

Champlin will always be wearing a reflective vest (see photo) and carry a large yellow flashlight. The patrols of the housing areas, like those on the base, will primarily focus on the less trafficked areas such as along fence lines that border the tank farms, in heavily brushed areas and along well traveled paths routinely used by the animals. The team will patrol during the day and throughout the night.

"That's the beauty of this contract - I'm on call all the time. The more contact SAM and I have with coyotes, the better it will teach the animals not to be here," Champlin said during a recent interview earlier this week. Ironically, he had to leave the interview early because of a call of a coyote sighting near Building 11, an animal he had previously chased out of a different area.

How you can help SAM and the coyotes:

1. Don't leave pet food outside your home.
2. Don't purposely feed the coyotes anything.
3. Never try to approach a coyote - if you see one, go back indoors or into your vehicle and call 841-4041 to report it. Make note of what time you saw the animal, where you saw it and what direction it is travelling.

Willow

Willow and the Juniper carry two complete sets of SORS equipment onboard at all times.

A SORS set consists of 124 feet of boom; one hydraulic skimmer; one swing arm which is mounted on the side of the ship and enough hose to stretch from the skimmers to the temporary fuel storage devices.

These systems and other similar types of skimming systems have been Coast Guard requirements since the Oil Pollution Control Act of 1990 was passed. At that time, the Coast Guard was given a mission to respond to oil spills either as emergency measures or in support of commercial vessels, as was the case last summer in the Gulf when 10 Coast Guard vessels were called upon to assist because of the size of the spill.

In addition to the Juniper crew members, the Willow was also host to four members of the USCG Atlantic Strike Team (AST) from Ft. Dix, N.J. These individuals are part of a deployable operations group whose primary mission is to deploy to a ship in an emergency to assist if expertise or manpower were needed.

"We came today to help make sure the crew is familiar and proficient with the equipment being trained," said Boatswain's Mate 2nd Class Dan Fountain. The four Strike Team members and First Coast Guard District civilian Mike Popovich, all environmental specialists, accompanied the Willow to maximize the value of the training given that day.

Approximately a third of the Willow's crewmembers transfer to other commands each year. The commanding officer and the majority of the enlisted are attached to the buoy tender for three years, with the other officers usually serving two-year tours.

All departments were mustered and benefitted from the training in ways that went beyond just SORS proficiency. Crew members also built teamwork skills and gained confidence.

Fireman 3rd Class Matthew Grady strapped on a portable compressor and got to work inflating the 12 sections of the boom; Seaman Jonathan Nichols monitored the skimmer controls; Seaman Wade Sandy stood his watch on the bridge. Machinery Technician 3rd Class Tracy Dorsey, recently named the Willow's Sailor of the Quarter, was busy with her department below the decks in the engine room.

"A lot is always going on behind the scenes," said Ensign Rachel Post.

NUWC to build Sensor Facility, periscope tower

NUWC Division Newport Public Affairs

MIDDLETOWN — The Naval Undersea Warfare Center (NUWC) Division Newport broke ground for a new $20.7 million Electromagnetic Sensor Facility last Monday.

R.I. Gov. Lincoln Chafee, Sen. Jack Reed, D-R.I., Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse, D-R.I., and U.S. Rep. David Cicilline, D-R.I., attended and participated in the groundbreaking.

"This project will result in a significant upgrade to our capabilities," said Capt. Todd Cramer, Commander of NUWC Newport. "Thanks to the addition of this facility, NUWC will be well-equipped to keep our submarines at the forefront of emerging electromagnetic sensor technologies well into the future."

When completed on the former Fleet Parking Lot north of Gate 17, the 54,000 square foot facility will include six laboratories and a five-story periscope tower designed to repair and certify periscopes, submarine communications systems, electronic warfare equipment, and imaging/optical systems.

The building will provide space for both personnel and equipment for prototyping, acquisition and production support, as well as in-service engineering and test functions. It will replace the current EMS facility currently in Building 68 on Pier 2.

"This is important for the Navy," said Reed. "With the maritime threats that we face, the ability of submarines to operate without detection close to shore makes them much more valuable than they were at any time in our history."

The building will also be NUWC Newport's first Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) certified building designed to achieve LEED-New Construction Gold Certification. It is expected to be completed by September 2013.

NUWC Newport is one of two divisions of the Naval Undersea Warfare Center.
